

Lotus Flower

The Lotus flower, despite the rumors, is not poisonous. It is actually very important in nature. It is a very beautiful plant, resembling a water lily. Its seeds provide for the Wood and Mallard Ducks and its roots provide for the Beaver and Muskrat.

Its stems and leaves provide shade for young Waterfowl, Fish, and Marshbirds. Not only does it provide for the other organisms in the area, but it is so beautiful, and smells so rich, heavenly almost. It is so intoxicating.

More About The Plant!

The lotus flower can be white, pink, red, or blue.

At night the bloom closes

It grows about 8-12 inches above the surface